

How a car accident attorney can help auto accident victims

We can help victims negotiate terms and seek verdicts or settlements from responsible individuals or other parties for:

- Compensation for bodily injury
- Loss of consortium
- Loss of wages
- Lost earning capacity
- Medical expenses, current and future
- Mental anguish
- Pain and suffering
- Property damage
- Therapy and rehabilitation costs
- Wrongful death

If you or someone you know has been seriously injured in a truck or car accident, contact an auto accident attorney for an evaluation of your case.

No one is truly financially ready to be in an accident. If you're hurt and can't work, and running out of money, there's a legal and ethical way to borrow money against your case: through an outside funding company.

This is sometimes an expensive way to go because interest rates tend to be high. You and your attorney must compare the interest rates charged by these companies. (Generally, the longer you have the money, the higher the finance charges.) But there is no fee if you don't recover for your lawsuit. That's right.

If your case loses, you do not have to repay the money, and the funding company eats the loss. Needless to say, funding companies screen cases carefully so as not to lend money on a loser. But if you're desperate and in need, they are a viable alternative—one that my clients have used from time to time.

Please, if you wish to borrow against your lawsuit, first consult with your attorney. He or she has probably worked with several different funding companies in the past, and could probably recommend one to you. And as with all things in life, please read the paperwork carefully.
